1. CLEAN TECH: Emirate channeling oil wealth into bid for green economy

ABU DHABI, United Arab Emirates -- The discovery of oil here in 1958 sparked Abu Dhabi's transformation from an outpost of palm-frond huts to a city of skyscrapers with a standard of living much like that of the United States or Europe. But Abu Dhabi isn't content with fossil-fueled success. Worried that an economy based on oil won't last forever, the government is building a new city nearby that will use a host of technologies -- some of them not yet invented -- to tame the harsh desert conditions and afford all the luxuries of modern life without the carbon baggage.
